CITY COUNCIL IS ADVERTISING FOR SWIM POOL BIDS

Roomy Plunge, 50 x 125 feet Is Planned by City Engineer Edw. C. Uren

The city council today is advertising for bids for the construction of the new swimming pool. City Engineer Edw. C. Uren, estimates that the pool itself will cost approximately $4,000. This is to include a tile scum trough, a cement walk 5 feet in width around the pool, a metal fence around that and the necessary outlet and inlet facilities.

As planned, the pool will be 50 feet wide and 125 feet long with water in one end, 2 feet deep, ranging to 9 or 10 feet deep in the other end to permit diving.

The cement work will be reinforced with steel rods in sides and wire mesh in the bottom. The walls are to be 10 inches thick and the floor 6 inches.

Work on construction of the pool is to be expedited in order to have it completed when the swimming season opens. When the pool is well started, work on the dressing rooms will be initiated.

SNIPERS TREK TO THEM THAR HILLS

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9.—With Spring in the air, the novice gold hunters again are flocking to the state division of mine office here for information on prospecting.

Although large numbers of prospective snipers have signified their intention to head for the hills, State Mineralogist Walter W. Bradley does not think the number will reach the 1933 peak of 15,000.

"Increased employment is putting many of the prospectors back to work," he says. "However, a lot of them work on federal projects part of the year and pan for gold the rest of the time."

Contrary to the belief that the higher gold price will result in heavier gold production by snipers, Bradley claims much of the productive ground has been worked out, and that inexperienced prospectors may have hard scratching to find the precious metal.

He says the comparatively dry winter will expose many hidden crevices which may contain rich gold deposits, but here again an evil is apt to counterbalance a good. If the water is low, the prospector may have a hard time finding enough to wash his gold.

Bradley adds:

I am afraid the fellow who has never sniped before will have his troubles this year. But the old timers stand a good chance to clean up on the higher gold price. The obvious gold deposits have been pretty thoroughly worked.

Already our laboratory is being flooded with samples of earth and rock to be tested for traces of gold. Unfortunately, very little of it has been worth anything. But that is no indication there is no gold left in the hills. The gold is there. The problem is finding it.

Miss Frances Davey has resumed her work in the Santa Maria high school after a week spent in Nevada City with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davey.

MINER IS GIVEN POST IN U. S. MINT AT S. F.

Milo Davidovich received a call Friday to come to San Francisco to accept a position in the San Francisco mint. His wife motored to Sacramento with him Saturday and he took the boat for the city that evening. He was offered a position in the mint in New York City about two weeks ago and asked if it would be possible to secure work in the mint in San Francisco where he was called.

Mr. and Mrs. Davidovich came to Nevada City about a year ago from Tonopah and have made many friends here in their short stay, who will be happy to learn the good news.

It is understood that Rolls is in a critical condition.

P. G. E. AND YUBA GOLD FIELDS CO. IN DREDGE PACT

HAMMONTON, April 9.—The Yuba Consolidated Gold Fields Company and the Pacific Gas and Electric Company have announced a joint expenditure of $65,000 in this field to keep pace with the renewed activities in dredger mining on the Yuba River.

The sum of $50,000 will be spent by the dredger company in the construction and equipment of a new electrical sub-station at this place because of the additional electric energy necessary under new plans to dredge deeper and possibly to dredge the ground upon which Hammonton now stands.

According to Ed C. Johnson, head of the Colgate division of the power firm, $15,000 will be spent by his company in the construction of a new high power line into the new station. Delivery of current has been promised by May 15th., about the time it is expected a remodeled dredger, to be the largest in the world, is completed. The present station at this place will be dismantled provided it is decided to dredge the site of Hammonton.

HIGHWAY STREETS IMPROVEMENT TO BE STARTED SOON

Agreement Between Nevada City and Highway Commission Has Been Signed

Director Earl Lee Kelly, of the Department of Public Works, has approved and signed a project agreement submitted by the City Council, of Nevada City, and forwarded through Mayor R. J. Bennetts, providing for the maintenance of state highway routes within the city limits, to be financed from the city's share of the one-quarter cent gas tax allocation.

The cost of the work, which is to be done entirely by the state, is estimated at $2,100, which is approximately the amount accruing to the city from the gas tax during the current biennium.

The work embraced in the agreement includes the maintenance of the streets comprising the state highway routes within the city, until June 30, 1935, as follows:

Route 15. York Street, from the junction of Routes 17 and 25 at Broad and York Streets, to Washington Street; Washington Street from York Street to Nevada Street; Nevada Street from Washington Street is northerly city limits, a length of approximately 0.65 mile.

Route 17. Zion Street from southerly city limits to Sacramento Street; Sacramento Street from Zion Street to Pine Street; Pine Street from Sacramento Street to Broad Street; Broad Street from Pine Street to York Street, a length of approximately 0.79 mile.

Route 25. Broad Street from the junction of Routes 15, 17 and 25 at York and Broad Streets to Downieville Highway, Downieville Highway from Broad Street to Monroe Street; Monroe Street from Downieville Highway to Downieville Highway; Downieville Highway from Monroe Street to the westerly city limits, a length of approximately 0.56 mile.

The cost of maintenance of Route 15 is estimated at $400; Route 17 at $900, and Route 25 at $800.

It is agreed that any funds accruing to the city from the gas tax moneys after deduction of the above costs shall accumulate to the credit of the city for expenditure at a later date.

Sales Tax Total Over $4,000,000 Per Month

SACRAMENTO, April 9—California has achieved the double distinction of collecting more sales tax revenue—at less overhead—than any other state in the nation.

Fred E. Stewart, of Oakland, a member of the State Board of Equalization, which administers the tax, so announced in a report here today.

Only about 1.8 per cent of collections under the California sales tax will be required to defray all costs of collection and administration, Stewart reported.

Stewart, co-author of the Riley-Stewart tax relief plan, which has made possible a reduction of more than $40,000,000 per year in the taxes of common property taxpayers, declared that economy of collection under the sales tax has surpassed all expectations.

"More than 200,000 retailers have been licensed under the California sales tax'," said Stewart, "and collections are running in excess of $4,000,000 per month—far greater than the yield in any of the 27 other states employing the sales tax.

"The efficiency of the administration of the tax in California is evidenced by the fact that our collections exceed the sales tax revenues of any other state, includng such populous states as Illinois, Michigan, and New York. Michigan, for example, has a 3 per cent tax, as compared with our 2½ per cent tax, and its collections have averaged only a little more than $2,225,000 per month.

"Although California is larger, in area, than any other state employing the sales tax, making administration more difficult, it is gratfying to report that our cost of administering and collecting the sales tax is the lowest in the nation. The State Legislature, in vesting the Board of Equalization with the responsibility of administering the tax, authorized an expenditure of 2 per cent of the funds collected to defray costs of administration. Todate the actual cost of administration has been only 1.8 per cent and it is possible that this overhead can be still further reduced in the months to come."

Costs of administering the sales tax in other states, Stewart reported, averaged from 3 to 3½ per cent of collections, running as high as 4 per cent in some instances.

BOY SCOUTS HIKE TO TOBIASSEN RANCH

A group of 12 Boy Scouts hiked to the Tobiassen ranch, just north of the Skeet Shoot range Saturday afternoon, and spent the night by a fine spring of water, where they also prepared their meals. Scout Master Edd Addington motored out late in the evening and spent the night with the boys. They returned home about two o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The Scouts are holding a meeting Wednesday evening to which they wish to invite all parents. Rev. H. Buckner is to be present and has promised that he will have a surprise for the Boy Scouts.

Three busses, of the Miner's Bus Lines, operated by Gove C. Celio, received coast of organe paint, in the last few days.

Moratorium For Mine Assessments Probable

District Attorney W. E. Wright is in receipt of a message from Congressman Harry L. Englebright in Washington, D. C., that the Senate had passed the same bill regarding assessment work on mining claims as last year and that a committee from the House had recommended favorable action. The matter is to come up shortly for determination in the House of Representatives, the opinion is being held that House of Representatives will pass the same bill.

The moratorium declared on assessment work on mining claims last year exempted all persons who did not pay an income tax and required that those desiring to hold their claims file a moratorium notice with the county recorder.

Again this moratorium will come as a great benefit to many who are unable to do their work without burdensome expense, that they could not well afford.

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christens Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley.

Having decided upon his course of action, Babson fell into a refreshing slumber; the next morning he was down at the bank at eight o'clock, looking quite his old self and wearing a white rose in his lapel. Emblematic of hope, doubtless.

* * * * * * *

Shortly after the bank had opened crippled Rance Kershaw limped in to borrow a thousand dollars to meet his monthly payroll. Babson demurred to loaning it, but finally compromised with a warning that such indiscriminate borrowing would have to cease very soon.

"By the way," he said, as he initialed his approval on the note, "are you going to retain your lease of the Bar H ranch?"

"I think not," Kershaw replied. "It expires next month, but I'll be hanged if I know where I can get the money to pay for a year in advance."

"Better retrench," Babson advised. "Let the Bar H ranch go, sell off half your cattle, even at the present low prices, get out of debt, quit paying interest and be happy. Where does Nate Tichenor reside now?"

"I don't know. I only know his lawyer's address. Why do you ask?"

"There was a man from San Francisco in here some time back. He'd been looking at the Bar H ranch and had a notion he'd like to buy it. I thought perhaps I might get in touch with Tichenor, negotiate a sale of his ranch for him and clean up a few dollars in commission. And yet, if you renew the lease it may militate against a sale."

"Go ahead," Rance Kershaw replied sadly. "I'm not going to renew the lease. You've been pretty good to me, Silas, and I won't stand in the way o' your turnin' a profit."

"Thanks," Babson murmured. "And this lawyer's address?"

Kershaw gave it to him, and a week later an attorney in San Francisco wrote Nate Tichenor, in care of the latter's attorney, requesting a price on the Bar H ranch in behalf of a client of his.

Ten days later Babson knew that the Bar H ranch was not for sale; whereat the banker had an immediate return of his former nervousness and depression and went home at noon. The situation was thoroughly beyond his comprehension; he had decided Nate Tichenor would sell the Bar H ranch and Nate Tichenor had disappointed him.

Of course, in a larger sense, Nate Tichenor's decision not to sell could not affect the interests of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district (Mr. Babson had decided to call it that), since the district could acquire the property via the condemnation suit route.

Immediately after church the following Sunday he motored up to Eden Valley, ostensibly to fish but with the intention of spending several hours inspecting the dam-site and lake-site. To his signal perturbation he discovered in the gorge a camp of three tents, a motor chuck-wagon, and five shirt-sleeved young men playing a modest game of poker under the shade of a cottonwood tree. Under an adjacent tree a field drafting table stood; it had a sheet of tracing paper tacked to it and hard by this table a surveying instrument was set up.

"Hello," Babson hailed them cheerfully, confident that his rod and creel would excuse him of undue inquisitiveness in penetrating to the camp. "What are you boys doing here?"

"Playing poker, sir. How about taking a hand? Twenty-five cent ante and a dollar limit."

Mr. Babson, not being accustomed to such gentle rebukes, flushed and passed on down the creek, leaving the engineering crew to their non-sabbatical pleasure.

Evidently Tichenor had sold, or was about to sell, his dam-site and lake-site to a power company, which had sent an engineering crew to make a preliminary survey and report before deciding to close the deal. His curiosity aroused, Babson crossed the creek, climbed the side of the hill, and was rewarded by finding the stakes of the engineering party. He followed them readily; they led him over the approximate route which any man with a fair eye for contours would have selected for the ditch to lead the water to the penstocks.

As a country banker Silas Babson had a far better knowledge of the law than most laymen; hence he realized now that if Nate Tichenor's dam-site and lake-site had been acquired by a power company, which is a public service corporation, no other public service corporation could condemn its property! Hence once more the Babson soul was steeped in despair.

The following morning Mr. Henry Rookby, his cashier-paying-teller-receiving-teller and confidential man, came to Babson's desk and laid upon it a copy of the latest edition of the Gold Run Nugget. Mr. Rookby had marked, in blue crayon, an item under the head of Real-Estate Transfers.

The item recorded the transfer by deed of gift, of four thousand acres, more or less, of certain lands, from Ranceford Kershaw to Lorraine Kershaw.

"Can't be a portion of the Circle ranch," Babson decided, and drew down from its case a map of the county.

Mr. Babson made a most surprising discovery. He had always assumed that Rance Kershaw owned no land east of the fence that divided the Circle K from the Bar H. To his amazement he had now discovered that Lorry Kershaw was the owner of four thousand acres, more or less, in that portion of Eden Valley which, in the event of a dam being built in the gorge, must constitute all or the greater portion of the area that must be inundated when the dam filled up! And Babson had always thought Nate Tichenor owned that land!

He could have cheered. No matter what Nate Tichenor might do with his dam-site now, he would have to consult Lorry Kershaw before selling it to a power company, and Babson thought he knew what the girl's answer would be. A deadlock between the two survivors of the feud!

"Got to get that four thousand acres more or less," Mr. Babson exulted. "The girl will sell to me. You bet she will. And then I'll do some trading with Nate Tichenor."

Within the week he had arranged his personal finances and purchased from the Savings Bank of San Francisco the first mortgage that the latter institution held on the Circle K ranch. With the mortgage in his possession, Babson dictated to Ranceford Kershaw a letter as firm as granite and as cold as a penguin's tail. He informed Kershaw that unless the mortgage was paid within five days a suit in foreclosure would be instituted. Then he dictated another letter, which he signed as president of the Bank of Valley Center, calling some thirty thousand dollars of Kershaw's notes.

He was striking at Rance Kershaw over the shoulder of the latter's daughter, quite confident that she would protect her father when Babson suggested that, in return for a renewal of the unsecured notes and mortgage, she should sell him at a reasonable price that four thousand acres with which he planned to embarrass Nate Tichenor!

He realized he must keep such a deal in abeyance until he could organize the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, for, with the district formed before Nate Tichenor could complete his deal with the power company, the district could enter a condemnation suit against Tichenor, and thus block the aspirations of the power company.

He distrusted the local legal talent in a crisis loaded with potential legal dynamite, so that night he went to

"Better Retrench," Babson Advised. "Let the Bar H Ranch Go."

San Francisco to engage the services of a legal firm noted throughout the state for its knowledge of water law. Indeed, Babson was rather in a hurry to get out of town, for he considered it good strategy to be absent when old Rance Kershaw should come into the bank to argue and plead. Leave a frightened, worried man alone for four days and he's much easier to handle on the fifth. So Babson departed, unconscious of the fact that his bluff, complicated with the sudden return of Nathan Tichenor to Eden Valley, was to kill Rance Kershaw and turn the current of the Kershaw hatred upon Silas Babson and all his works and pomps.

Nate Tichenor, from early boyhood, had had more than his share of experience with sudden death and tragedy, and it had developed in him a certain stolidity and philosophy in such emergencies. For ten minutes he held Lorry Kershaw's head against his shoulder and neither spoke nor moved.

"Now, then, Miss Kershaw," he soothed presently, "this is no time for weak- You're a Kershaw and none of your clan ever needed time out for that. You said you wanted to take your father home?"

She nodded drearily. The Kershaws, like the Hensleys, always buried their own dead.

"And I wouldn't, if I were you, permit my mind to dwell on the thought of your absolute aloneness in the world," he continued. "That way madness lies. I know. I've been through all that. After two years in the A. E. F., where, it seemed to me, I lost every comrade I managed to achieve an affection for; after losing my mother and aunts while I was in France and realizing I hadn't a single friend in the community where I was born and raised, I found myself, when the war ended, the loneliest human being imaginable. Often I wanted to come back to Eden Valley and know you better but—"

"Yes, I understand. Father was what he was, poor dear."

"Well, be that as it may, you're not nearly so badly off as you think you are, and one of these days, when you have time to think about it, I'll tell you why." He was almost abrupt. "I suppose we'd better get along."

"Yes, I suppose so," she agreed and started her motor. Nate Tichenor followed in his car. Arrived at the Circle K headquarters no men came out to meet them.

"Where are your riders?" he queried.

"They started with the cattle drive up into the forest reserve this morning."

He lifted Rance Kershaw's body out of the car, carried it into the house and disposed it on Kershaw's bed.

He drew a sheet over the corpse and rejoined the girl in the living room. "I reckon," he said, in the homely mountain idiom, "you Kershaws never have any truck with undertakers. Seems to me the Kershaws don't use preachers, either."

"No, we just read the service ourselves."

"The Hensleys always did, too. Lock the house up and drive in to Valley Center with me in my car. Have you in mind some woman friend you can bring back with you to keep you company?"

"I have no friends, Nate Tichenor."

He frowned, then smiled faintly. "I forgot we're the last survivors of two clans that were beyond the pale. Well, we'll hire somebody. There must be a practical nurse in Valley Center. When we get there I'll telegraph my old superintendent, Rube Tenney, to come up here with his wife and two children."

She yielded without argument to his suggestions—commands, rather.

Doctor Donaldson made no comment when, in his office an hour later, Lorry Kershaw informed him of her father's death. He readily issued a death certificate. He was a gruff old fellow and not in the least politic, as Tichenor realized when Donaldson growled:

"So you two have buried the hatchet, eh?"

He flushed as Tichenor's bleak blue eyes rebuked him.

"It's none of my business, of course," Donaldson apologized. "I merely hoped for Miss Lorry's sake—"

Nate Tichenor smiled at him.

"I understand, doctor. No offense if your intentions were kindly."

"Thank you, they were. When will the funeral take place?"

"Tomorrow, at two o'clock," Lorry answered him.

"I'll telephone the coroner," Donaldson went on. "He'll take my word for it that an inquest isn't necessary, and issue the burial permit."

While Lorry Kershaw waited in the car, Nate Tichenor scouted around town and succeeded in engaging the services of a Miss Lizzie Bachman, who in her youth had almost graduated from a nurse's training school in San Francisco.

Not for considerable would Miss Bachman have missed this assignment. It was too meaty with gossip. Nate Tichenor dancing attendance on Lorry Kershaw!

Tichenor's next action was to call upon the editor of the local weekly paper, the Valley Center Register. "I am Nathan Tichenor, of Eden Valley," he announced. "I do not seem to remember you. Apparently you came to Valley Center after I left Eden Valley."

He Lifted Rance Kershaw's Body Out of the Car.

The editor said his name was Joe Brainerd and that he was pleased to meet Mr. Tichenor.

"Mr. Ranceford Kershaw died about three hours ago, very suddenly, Mr. Brainerd," Nate told him. "No, I didn't kill him. He perished of heart disease and will be buried in the Kershaw family cemetery in Eden Valley at two p. m. tomorrow. Friends and neighbors are invited to attend. And may I ask, Mr. Brainerd, as a special favor to Miss Lorry Kershaw and myself, that you do not take this opportunity to print a couple of columns of ancient history? Although you do not know it, the Hensley-Kershaw feud ended in 1917. Both Miss Kershaw and I would like to think that the matter is by way of being forgotten and we'll both be very grateful for your co-operation."

"My dear sir," Brainerd replied with dignity, "you mustn't presume to formulate my editorial policy."

Nate Tichenor looked Brainerd over bleakly. "Very well, run it. Next week there'll be another newspaper in this town, with a real newspaper man in charge, and you'll have a taste of active competition. And now that we understand each other, I want you to run off a hundred black-bordered death notices and send a man to paste them up in various conspicuous places around the town. That used to be the custom in this country. A few people might like to know of Rance Kershaw's death, so they can come to his funeral as advertised."

He wrote out the copy for the job-printer, paid his bill and departed without further conversation. The editor put on his hat and walked over to the local hotel upon the veranda of which sat Mr. William Rooney, the deputy sheriff of the Valley Center district.

"Bill," he queried, "what do you know about Nathan Tichenor?"

"Nothing bad. Why?"

"Would you say that a threat of his should be taken seriously?"

Five Deer Increase to 162 in Six Years at Michigan Zoology Museum

In only six years, three bucks and two does released on a reserve near Pinckney increased to a total of 162 deer, according to a tally made by a group of naturalists of the University of Michigan Museum of Zoology, in the first actual count of deer ever to be made on a measured area in Michigan.

"Although most of us believed that the deer herd was increasing very fast during the past few years, this number of 162 deer is much greater than was generally believed to be present," commented the keeper of the reserve for the University of Michigan museum. The use of the reserve has been given to the university as an area for biological observation.

About thirty people, which included many members of the scientific staff of the university museum and the Michigan conservation department, participated in the deer drive and tally. When the figures were finally compiled, it was found that there were 83 does, 43 bucks and 33 fawns. According to the keeper, it is quite possible, however, that these numbers are not entirely accurate, since the count was not completed until late afternoon, when it was quite possible for a spikehorn to be counted as a doe.

As the deer herd continues to multiply on this small area, the university museum hopes to discover at what point the height of population will be reached, when parasites and disease will enter in because of overcrowding, together with other facts of importance to the welfare of all of Michigan's white-tailed deer.—Detroit Free Press.

AFTERNOON FROCK

PATTERN 1527

The frocks of the new season achieve their definite style purpose only when they fit the woman—her personality as well as her figure—and fit the occasion, too. Today's model has lines that have universal appeal, up-to-the-minute and ageless, and wearable every hour of the day. Contrast is introduced by the flattering revers, while chic seaming creates the attractive new one-side effect, and sleeves hold interest without exaggeration. Effective in faille, mossy crepe, or sheer wool, with bengaline or satin for contrast.

Pattern 1527 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 takes 3⅝ yards 39 inch fabric, and ½ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

GOOD ADVICE AS TO IMPROVEMENT OF ROADSIDES

Local materials for roadside improvement can be utilized at a comparatively low cost, says Wilbur H. Simonson, landscape architect of the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture. Such materials include boulders or native stone for guard rails, suitable plant material salvaged in the path of construction operations, trees and undergrowth carefully trimmed in contrast with haphazard cutting, and other such objects naturally adapted to the landscape.

The use of approved landscape and horticultural specifications for trees and plants for roadside improvements is the best safeguard in the planning and execution of roadside improvements, says Mr. Simonson. Co-operation between all parties engaged in planning the work is necessary to insure final harmony and attractive results.

For the price of a single mile of highgrade road surface 30 miles of roadside can be improved. This estimate by Mr. Simonson is based on plant materials obtained through fair competitive bids, unified control of highway building so that construction scars are avoided, side slopes graded during construction operations to fit landscape requirements, and the salvaging of valuable tree growth.

Mr. Simonson calls attention to the importance of parking places, spring outlets, railings, and other such features that the motorist sees and enjoys which are not necessarily more expensive when attractively developed.

Marriage Symbol

Are wedding rings the sort of thing a well-dressed woman ought to wear?

They were criticized the other day by Lady Mount Temple on the ground that they matched nothing and "killed" other rings. Most wives, however, would say that a wedding ring ought to be easily recognizable as such, and that, anyway, they preferred the traditional style.

Realy, however, the tradition is not of long standing. The wedding rings of the early days of the Christian era were quite frequently marked with a cross, and other rings bore the same symbol. Later, stones were set in the wedding ring, as in others, or it was engraved more or less elaborately. The plain circlet of gold is only about three hundred years old, and was introduced as a symbol of Puritan revolt against "gauds."

It is notable, too, that the "tradition" of the plain gold circlet hasn't prevented the appearance of the platinum wedding ring, or kept it from becoming popular. — London Tit-Bits.

Russia Abandons Idea of Communistic "Home"

A law recognizing the family as the unit of legislation in the government of the household has sounded the death knell for the champions of "free union" in Russia. The new Russian marriage law, theoretically as free as formerly, makes divorce practically impossible for the average husband and wife because of the difficulty and expense involved. Men who do not support their children will be arrested.

According to the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, the recent revival of "radicalism," which attempted to abolish the status of the housewife in the industrial productive process and substitute communistic homes with kitchens and dining rooms used "in common," was of no avail against the strength of the family unit, which proved too strong for the communistic ideal to shatter. Under the present law the communistic home was formally abandoned.—Literary Digest.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

President's Veto of Appropriation Bill Overridden by Both Houses; Farley Forces Shakeup in Air Companies; "Brain Trust" to Be Investigated.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S leadership received its first important setback when the senate, following similar action by the house, overrode his veto of the independent offices appropriation bill carrying the veterans' and federal pay provisions. The vote in the senate was 63 to 27, or three more than the required two-thirds. In the house the vote was overwhelming, 310 to 72, a margin of 55 more than the necessary two-thirds.

President Roosevelt

The bill is now a law, and its passage is of high significance, as it throws the budget estimates out of kilter and adds greatly to the tax burden of the people. But of more importance is the evident fact that the President has lost his firm grip on congress. Fear of reprisals by war veteran voters in the coming elections proved a greater fear with many Democratic senators than the displeasure of the President.

Restoring two-thirds of a 15 per cent pay cut voted for a million government employees, including military and naval personnel, in the economy act last summer, the bill also greatly liberalizes compensation and pensions to veterans of the World and Spanish-American wars.

The bill will cost the government an additional $210,000,000 annually.

It eliminates retroactively as of February 1, 1934, one-third of the federal employees' pay cut and an additional third on July 1. The cost to the government under the provision will be $26,000,000 for the period from February 1 to July 1, and $126,000,000 annually thereafter.

While the President by executive order has restored many veterans to the compensation and hospitalization rolls, congress made mandatory awards estimated to cost the government about $84,000,000 annually and an additional $21,000,000 for the rest of the present fiscal year.

The increased amounts for government workers and veterans will come from the general revenues of the government.

AFTER weeks of exhausting negotiations the threatened strike in the automobile industry was averted when President Roosevelt secured an agreement between executives and labor leaders. Representation for all employees in dealing with management was established, and safeguards were extended to all unions against intimidation or interference.

"It is my hope," said the President, "that this system may develop into a kind of works council in industry in which all groups of employees, whatever may be their choice or organization of form of representation, may participate in joint conference with their employers."

He hailed this as basis for a more comprehensive, adequate and equitable system of relations than ever has existed in a large industry.

The agreement avoids the licensing of the automobile industry, which labor threatened to invoke if there was no agreement. The American Federation of Labor is not recognized as such by industry except when its affiliates have the necessary votes on the collective bargaining committee.

One of the provisions of the agreement was that the NRA should set up a board, responsible to the President, to sit in Detroit and pass upon all questions of representation, discharge, and discrimination. Decision of the board is to be final upon all concerned. Three men will serve on the board, one representing labor, one industry, the third being neutral.

WEARY from the strain of close application to the affairs of state, President Roosevelt departed for a short vacation aboard Vincent Astor's yacht. He headed for the warm climes of southern waters to fish and relax for a week. It was an unprecedented move for the Executive to leave Washington while congress is in session, but with the same spirit of a year ago when he set out on the same yacht before taking the Presidential reins, the President greeted his cronies aboard ship and waved his hat to a rousing farewell from the folks on the dock at Jacksonville, Fla., where he boarded the yacht.

With carefree happiness he posed for the photographers and joshed the newspaper men. He chatted eagerly with his eldest son, James, who joined him here for the cruise.

For the next week or more, the President will be fishing and swimming, away from the heavy cares of office. He intends to return to Washington within the ten-day constitutional limit required for consideration of any legislation passed by congress.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT Monday called on congress to pass legislation with "teeth in it" for the control of the nation's stock and commodity exchanges.

He asked that the law be so severe "that speculation, even as it exists today, will of necessity be drastically curtailed." His demand was made in a letter to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Dem., Fla.) and Representative Sam Rayburn (Dem., Texas), chairmen of the congressional committees which are handling the pending stock exchange bills.

Charging the exchanges with organizing one of the most determined lobbies which has fought any of his legislation, the President said that the country would not be satisfied unless the exchange control message is drastic. People generally, the President said, blame the speculation on exchanges for the 1929 artificial boom and the resulting slump.

IN THE foreword of his forthcoming new book, "On Our Way," President Roosevelt says if his administration "is a revolution, it is a peaceful one, achieved without violence, without the overthrow of the purpose of established law and without the denial of just treatment to any individual or class."

The proofs of the foreword, given out by the publishers, the John Day company, read:

"Some people have called our new policy 'fascism.' It is not fascism because its inspiration springs from the mass of the people themselves rather than from a class or a group or a marching army. Moreover, it is being achieved without a change in fundamental republican method. We have kept the faith with, and in, our traditional political institutions.

"Some people have called it 'communism'; it is not that, either. It is not a driving regimentation founded upon the plans of a perpetuating directorate which subordinates the making of laws and the processes of the courts to the orders of the executives. Neither does it manifest itself in the total elimination of any class or in the abolition of private property.

"If it is a revolution, it is a peaceful one, achieved without violence, without the overthrow of the purposes of established law and without the denial of just treatment to any individual or class."

CHARGES made by Dr. William A. Wirt, superintendent of schools at Gary, Ind., that some of President Roosevelt's advisers wanted to lead the government into communism are to be investigated by a committee of the house of representatives. Doctor Wirt will be called before this committee to name the man or men who told him that President Roosevelt is merely the "Kerensky of this revolution" and that the radicals within the administration are seeking to foster a revolution by prolonging misery and destitution in this country.

Dr. W. A. Wirt

Republican members of the house were determined that the inquiry will not be confined to the Wirt allegations alone, despite an apparent desire on the part of Democratic leaders to narrow the investigation's scope.

Democratic members of the house were making an effort to confine the inquiry to the allegations made by the Gary educator alone. Under pressure from Republicans, however, it was agreed by the Democratic leaders that the men named by Doctor Wirt will have to be called.

The entire matter is being treated as a joke by members of the so-called "brain trust." They declare that Doctor Wirt has been made the victim of a practical joke by a mischievous member of the radical group. There were several different stories current as to the origin of the Wirt allegations, one version having it that the Gary educator mistook a newspaper man in New York for an official of the administration.

TWENTY-five thousand school children in German cities will be separated from their parents and sent to the country for a year by order of the Prussian state.

This is in line with the Nazi policy of "reconciliation of urban and rural population" which will be fostered by sending every town child to the country for a year. The 25,000 will compose the first trial batch. The year in the country will be financed partly by the state of Prussia and partly by school organizations.

BACK again at the scene of his triumphs and his failure, after being a fugitive for 18 months, Martin Insull, brother of Samuel Insull, is in Chicago to answer a charge of embezzlement from the treasury of the Middle West Utilities.

Insull arrived in Chicago—where he had lived for more than 40 years—an alien, technically excluded from the United States but paroled to Lieutenant Johnson until the charges against him are disposed of. His arrival ended a sensational trip from Toronto, with the most extraordinary entry of an alien into the United States ever recorded in the busy Detroit immigration office.

THE number of individuals living on farms reached a record peak of 32,509,000 on January 1.

The bureau of agricultural economics, in a new study of farm population, attributed the increase principally to an excess of births over deaths, since more people left farms for cities, in 1933 in a continuation of the farm exodus of the past decade, than went from cities to farms. Persons who moved to farms last year were 951,000, while 1,178,000 moved away.

The farm-bound movement involved 1,544,000 persons in 1932 while those moving away numbered 1,011,000.

The bureau based its estimates on data gathered on 146,817 farms in all parts of the country.

MONTHS of political unrest in Estonia, Baltic nation of 1,121,000 inhabitants, have culminated in a dictatorship, according to advices from Tallinn, the capital.

Gen. Johan Laidoner, commander in chief of the Estonian army, and known as "Estonia's George Washington," has assumed supreme authority with the agreement of the president and parliament.

A COMPLETE shakeup in commercial air lines, using the return of the air mail to private lines as a bait, is being forced by Postmaster General Farley. Thirty officials in private aviation companies must be forced out of office, the whole air mail structure is to be rebuilt, and all the old companies carrying mails must reorganize if they wish to share in federal air mail subsidies in the future.

J. A. Farley

Both Republican and Democratic members of congress assailed the new order, denouncing the terms as too drastic.

Steps for the return of the air mail to private lines were launched immediately by advertising for bids on 15 routes, comprising 17,826 miles. None of the companies which had their previous contracts canceled will be allowed to bid unless they completely reorganize and drop all officials suspected of fraud or collusion in past bidding. The new bids will be for three months only, but may be extended for another six months if necessary. They are intended to provide private flying of the mails pending the settlement of a permanent air mail policy by congress.

A new system for computing rates which are to be paid for carrying the mails was announced. The new rates will be based on the average load carried per mile over the route during the month.

AUSTRIA'S new corporative constitution, as published in the official government gazette, gives the President powers similar to those possessed by the late Emperor Franz Josef when he ascended the throne after crushing a republican revolution in 1848. The president will rule through the constitution, but may change it whenever he thinks an emergency demands. The constitution will be based on the principle that all power emanates from God—in contrast to the present one, which says all power emanates from the people.

But the people, nevertheless, will be given an opportunity to express their opinion at the polls whenever the government thinks this advisable. Popular initiative, however, is barred and the people will not have constitutional rights to elect their own government. All legislation must be initiated by the government, which will be advised but not controlled by four consultative bodies.

These will be the state council of 40 to 50 members appointed by the president; the federal cultural council, consisting of representatives of churches, religious societies and schools; the federal economic council, chosen from business, industrial, agricultural and financial circles, and the provincial council, consisting of governors and finance ministers of the various provinces.

RETENTION of the restrictions imposed on immigration by the present laws was recommended by a committee of 48 men and women appointed several months ago by Secretary Perkins to study the problem.

Only minor relaxations were suggested. The committee urged proper provision for reuniting families separated by immigration and providing asylum for refugees from racial and political persecution within the immigration quotas.

Relentless war on aliens who commit crimes and on the racketeer and gangster was recommended.

The committee proposed, however, that provision be made so illegal entrants who have proved themselves desirable citizens could legalize their residence. It opposed deportation of aliens brought to this country as children but who have never qualified for citizenship.

A PLAN for the complete freedom of the Philippines in 1945 or soon thereafter was written upon the statute books when President Roosevelt signed the McDuffie-Tidings bill. The Philippine legislature must accept the measure by October 1. Representatives from the islands present in Washington declared that it would be accepted by the legislature on May 1

"This is a great day for you and for me," the President told President Manuel L. Quezon of the Philippine senate, adding that if invited he would attend the inaugural ceremonies of the new republic ten to twelve years hence.

Sift The Wheat, Mr. Voter

American government, during last year, spent nearly 50 per cent of everything that the American people earned.

Roughly estimated, the national tax burden amounted to about 24 per cent of the national income.

And on top of this and plus this colossal tax bill, government borrowed and spent—to be paid in taxes at some later date—approximately 25 per cent of the people's earnings!

Such, in brief form, is the story of governmental finance for 1933.

Translated into individual terms, it means that the average American citizen has assumed a 50-50 partnership with government—a partnership of vast responsibilities and tremendous significance.

To the California farmer, for example, it means that political harvests and crop harvests—temporarily, at least, are of equal importance.

Taking stock of the situation, California citizens in every walk of life, will scan the list of candidates for state and local offices this year, as well as their platforms, with vital and personal interest, if they are alert in the protection of their pocketbooks.

And there is every indication that candidates for every office from Governor to town clerk, will go to the electorate on programs of "economy and efficiency."

Sifting the wheat from the chaff, in the face of such conditions, will be a test of both voter-interest and voter-intelligence.

They Say

They say—a frightful thing is seen
At times in ocean, lake, or stream;
A monster from primordial seas,
And not the specter of a dream.
Now honest men have seen the brute—
To doubt that fact would seem absurd;
But I do wish we had some proof
Beside their plain, unvarnished word.

They say—that in a northern stream,
Two startled hunters, far from slow,
Beheld the creature's slimy coils
And, taking steady aim, let go.
They did not strive to catch the snake,
Or take a snap shot, so 'tis said;
They just stood there with bulging eyes
And "calmly pumped it full of lead!"

They say—that if Los Angeles
Should find that serpent in her sea,
To capture it alive and well,
Her denizens would all agree.
They'd lure it with pure orange juice
And avocados dipped in honey;
And then the advertising staff
Would start campaigns to rake in money.

They say—they'd build a gilded tank
Of most "unusual" shape and size,
And by its side vast tourist throngs
Would stand aghast in wild surprise.
Above the reptile's monstrous form
A glaring search light would be swirled,
To light a sign that bore these words,
"The Biggest Sea Snake In The World!"

Oh dear, I wish our northern boys
Had caught that snake and named it Ned;
We might have staged a show ourselves—
But gosh, they "pumped it full of lead!"

PARKING ON GRADE

When parking the car for any unusual length of time, such as on a camping trip, it is advisable to select a hillside where the car can be made to start, should the starter or battery fail to operate. suggests the Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. Second gear is best when cranking the car in this manner.

TOO FLEXIBLE SPRINGS

Springs that are too flexible and permit the car frame to strike the axle, should be removed and reset, according to the Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. Unless this condition is corrected, damage to the chassis may result.

BROODS OF GAME BIRDS OUT EARLY

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9th.,—Not only are flowers blooming earlier and fruit trees budding out two or three weeks ahead of time this year, but upland game birds are taking advantage of the early spring weather, nd have started raising families. The feathered newcomers have been in evidence since the middle of March in various sections of the state, a month before the usual appearance of these species.

Near Oroville, a pheasant hen with 12 baby chicks yas observed by game wardens, while C. C. Huber, of Newman reports seeing a quail hen with five little ones on a ranch near Newman, March 15. Qual and pheasants are usually just starting to ly at that time of year.

At the Yountville game farm, operated by the State Fish and Game Commission ,quail, pheasants, wild turkeys, chukor partridges, wild ducks and geese have started to lay eggs, and more than 2000 eggs were gathered before April 1. Incubators are already "set" wtih the first of the 1934 crop of upland game birds.

August Bade, superintendent of the state farms, is striving to beat all previous records for game production this year, with a mark of 25,000 from the farms.

To increase the supply of these birds to be released on refuges within the state of California, sportmen's clubs are cooperating in a manner tht mkes it possible to rise more of this game. By providing holding pens in the variaus counties, the clubs obtain from the game farms young pheasants which they care for until the birds are grown and able to care forthemselves, then they are liberated on areas where feed, water and close protection is furnished.

Siskiyou sportsmen are leaders in this program, and during recent years have erected 36 of these holding pens from which hundreds of birds have been turned loose. Kern county with 20 pens is second. San Rafael has 12 pens and others have been erected in several other Marin county areas. There are some also in Sonoma county, and in this section many pheasant eggs sent from the game farm are hatched in the incubators.

Fresno county sportsmen are preparing to put up a number of these holding pens as are organizations in Sonora and Woodland.

FRENCH CORRAL

(By Mrs. Kate M. Sulivan)

FRENCH CORRAL, April 6th—Beautiful April—Who could help loving God, who makes possible all this wonderful beauty for us; the wild flowers, on hillside and roadside, growing without care or attention! Did Angel hands scatter the seed? We wonder.

The dawn of Easter morning usherd in our beautiful April this year and after the regular session of Sunday School at ten o'clock, all repaired to Bishop's ficeld where a picnic and egg hunt had been planned. It was an ideal spot for a picnic the beautiful live oaks giving shade, and the field ablaze with California Golden Poppies. For a time happy children romped in the grass in their search for "easter eggs" and they found them in abundance. The assemblige was then called to oroder and Mr. Shelly gave a short address explanatory of Easter and the miracle of the Resurrection, after which appropriate hymns were sung. Next came the very important feature of picnic lunch. Tables were spread and the boxes and baskets brought out and soon a most sumptuous and delicious luncheon was disposed of.

As many of the neighbors who had the opportunity had gone to the Twin Cities to be present at the Easter services, the picnic attendance was not so large, but by actual count numbered 53 persons. Altogether a very happy day was spent and we hope for many more that may be as well spent.

Miss Theresa O'Connor, teacher of French Corral school spent several days of last week with relatives in Sacramento.

Mrs. W. E. Moulton accompanieid her daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Dudley and husband to Nevada City to attend the Easter services.

The O'Connor family of Birchville, and the Reader family of Sweetland, attended Easter Services in Grass Valley and Nevada City.

At the election of School Trustee in this district, Mrs. J. W. Culver was returned to the position without opposition.

L. Roberts, representing the Capper Publications was a business visitor this week.

Mrs. Harris, of North San Juan, and Mrs. Lyser, of Sweetland, were hursday visitors.

We regret to hear of the illness of our neighbor, A. Browning, who was hurt in the Murchie Mine a short time ago, by the falling of a timber. Mrs. Browning has been in Nevada City attending her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Kessler and children of North San Juan, visited relatives here Thursday evening.

Again the cloud of unemployment overhangs this section as orders were received to suspend all N.R.A. work. We hope the suspension will be only temporary, as it throws so many of our people out of employment.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Bishop, of Marysville, paid a visit to French Corral last week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Baker, of Sacramento, spent the week-end with the family of W. E. Moulton.

F. Miller, of French Corral, will drive the school bus from this place to Nevada City, as Mr. Dare has other interests to which he must give his attention.

FEATHER RIVER ROUTE BOOSTERS PLAN RALLY

Completion of the Feather River Highway at the earliest possible date will be the keynote of a gathering of officials and civic leaders at Oroville on April 27th. In attendance will be delegates from various parts of the Feather River region and other parts of Northern California and the Sacramento Valley. Work on the project has been under way for the past six years and approximately $4,000,000 has been expended on a highway that is destined to be one of the most important interstate routes in California. The gathering will formulate plans to secure allocation of further available funds to expedite early completion of the highway.

The current state highway budget provided $670,000 for grading operations on the Feather River Highway project ni Butte County and $590,000 for similar work in Plumas County, but considerable work will still remain when thes funds have been expended.

The Feather River Highway will provide an all year route to the east and has many spots or scenic beauty unsurpassed by anything in the state of California.

ACME BODY & FENDER WKS.

Acme body and fender works that are located at 136 East Main street, Grass Valley— Phone 205—J has greatly prolonged the life of many a car and truck. In the fender department they offer a most complete service, taking out all dents and making the fenders look like new.

One of the features of their service that is highly important is the repairing and replacing of wrecked bodies. No matter how bad the accident may be, they will take the car and rebuild it so that all marks are gone and it give as good service as ever.

They also specialize in axle and frame work and if you have overturned or gotten into a smash-up and bent or twisted your axle or frame they are prepared to straighten it out and put it in as satisfactory shape as before.

They offer an excellent service in automobile painting and use Duco which has gained a nation-wide reputation as the peer of all lacquer finishes for automobile bodies. They offer you a wide range of colors to choose from and you will only lose the use of your car a very short time.

In this review we are glad to compliment Mr. F. O. Thompkins upon the excellent workmanship and rapid service with which he serves this community and anyone in need of such services will do well to call around and talk it over with him.

MEXICAN QUAIL TO STOCK RANGES

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9th.—At the annual meeting of the Lindsay Fish and Game Association this month which was attended by more than 650 enthusiastic hunters and anglers, J. Dale Gentry, president of he State Fish and Game Commission, declared the time had come for sportsmen to center on a program that would develop fish and game that has proven adaptable to, or was native of, California.

"Importing new fish, birds and animals slows up the progress or replenishing our streams, lakes and mountains. However, we do not propose to abandon all experiments with foreign game," he said.

"Division of water from natural channels, running pipe lines to the source, cementing over springs and dryig up streams has done more to deplete the supply of game than all hunters and predators," he asserted. The depletion of quail, once so numerous in California, can be traced to this lack of water, and until farmers and water companies can be prevailed to permit a little water to escape from pipe lines they use to carry their supply for irrigation, we will have difficulty in replenishing this great native game bird.

"The commission is in the midst of a plan to bring this bird bach," Gentry told the Lindsay sportsmen. 'We have contracted for the purchase of 100,000 valley qual from Mexico. Delivery has been made on some 15,000 of this order. As soon as the nesting season is over we will rsume importations until the full quota is filled, and by the beginning of next year 100,000 of these birds will have been distributed throughout the state, on refuges donated by the public spirited land owners."

The price paid for these birds is one-fifth the cost of raising them on the state game farms whhich are limited as to the number they can produce. The trapped birds are considered much better than those that are raised artificially, as they are in the best of condition and understand from the start how to rustle for themselves.

The Commissioner added that it will be possible to purchase a quarter million of these birds, and distribute them in every area where they will thrive.

Through the efforts of President Gentry and Commissioner Earl B. Gilmore, all import and export duties have been waived by the United States and Mexican governmenst.

GOOD TREADS HELP BRAKES

The distance required for stopping is materially reduced with good rubber as compared with tires on which the treads are worn smooth, according to the Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. Smooth tires lack the road grippnig qualities of good tires. Consequently worn tires increase the accident hazzard.

ONE WHO KNEW

A large city firm gave a series of lectures after office hours designed to help employees in salesmanship. They were well attended.

At the end of the last lecture the manager made a speech.

"Gentleman," he said, "I have to commend you for attending these excellent lectures when you might have been at some theater with your wife, or at the cinema with some other fellow's wife."

Most Perplexing

"How's your new cook?" asked Jones' neighbor.

"Quite satisfactory," said Jones. "We've only one complaint to make about her."

"And what is that?" his neighbor inquired.

"It's most annoying," explained Jones. "We can never tell whether she is singing because she is happy at her work, or whether she has burnt herself and is in pain."

Beginning of Property

"I suppose winning money from that tenderfoot was like taking candy from a child."

"Just about," replied Three-finger Sam; "assumin' you have noticed what a howling fuss any kid kin put up if you try to grab his confectionery."—Philanderer Johnson in the Washington Star.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Nine cattle on the University of California College of Agriculture farm at Davis were killed when arsenic water accidentally flowed into their pasture.

Dismissal of 111 teachers in San Francisco public schools because they are non-residents was formally demanded recently by the Good Government League.

More than 500 former residents of Kings county will receive invitations to attend the eighth annual homecoming and Pioneers' Day celebration in Hanford on May 11.

Neutrons are now being produced in such enormous quantities at the California Institute of Technology that new hope exists that it will eventually be possible to test a theory that neutron beams are superior to X-rays in treating certain forms of cancer, it was reported from Pasadena.

Medical men are hailing a new radio knife for surgery as a boon to surgeons and patients alike, according to Pasadena reports. C. J. Breitwieser, graduate research student at the California Institute of Technology, in his spare time and with his surplus cash, built apparatus for converting an ordinary scalpel into an electrical surgical instrument by high frequency radio waves.

Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz of Los Angeles county has instructed his men to aid women drivers whenever possible. "Keep a sharp lookout and be ready to be of assistance, at all times, to those in distress, particularly concerning women and children in stalled automobiles."

California civil service as it is now operated is just as bad, if not worse than patronage methods charged to the Board of Equalization, and if R. E. Collins, board chairman, has his way, the board will oppose moves to place it under civil service. "I don't want a bunch of high school kids working for me," he declared. "Trick questions of civil service more often than not eliminate those best suited for the job."

Machinery developed during the past six years is enabling men to construct the Metropolitan Water District aqueduct about a year ahead of schedule, Prof. R. W. Sorrensen of the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, reported on return from his first survey of the project in two years.

More than $4,000,000 in assessed valuation will be added to Richmond's taxable rolls in 1935 when the properties of public service corporations are returned to cities and counties.

George and Frank Brandt, who claim to be the oldest bachelor twins living together, celebrated their 86th birthday anniversary in Chico recently.

As a result of exhaustive tests made by a visibility crew the past few months, 12 new look-out stations will be located in the Angeles National Forest, Chief Fire Dispatcher Virgil C. De Lapp announced in Pasadena. Only two of the eight locations now used will be retained, according to recommendations of the California Forest Experiment Station experts which have been approved by the forest service.

State finance director estimates that a total of between $367,000,000 and $387,000,000 is needed for the 1935-37 budget of the state. He said the budget total will be about 7 per cent in excess of the 1933-35 budget and that this increase will be a normal one considering the state's population growth, which he estimated to be 3½ per cent annually compounded.

His fondness for owls, pheasants, deer heads and skins of wild animals led A. Burzanch of Corona into justice court. He admitted taking a number of them from Charles Newcomb, Corona taxidermist, officers said, and traveled nearly 100 miles locating the articles with a constable.

California is free to collect nearly $1,000,000 a year in wine and beer taxes as the result of a decision handed down by the third district court of appeal. In the decision the judiciary upholds the legality of the two cents per gallon tax on all wine and beer sold in the state.

The projected survey of the Aleutian Islands this summer will be undertaken by three separate expeditions, San Pedro navy officials have revealed. Submarines have been added to the surface ship and aircraft division which have been ordered to prepare for the trip, which will be of unprecedented scope.

Members of the Sonoma county Beverage Association have condemned the activities of the bootlegger and illegal liquor dealers and are on record pledging full support and cooperation to county, state and federal authorities in enforcement of the present liquor laws.

Sonoma county's move against employing Filipino labor in that county has been gaining headway, according to reports from Santa Rosa, where numerous meetings have been held lately. Women's clubs were prime movers in the drive.

Astrology Surely One of Oldest of Sciences

The beginning of astrology occurred a long time ago—so long ago that it was before any recorded history. Every period of man's existence on this planet in his present form has included knowledge of planetary influences. The historian Josephus, who lived in the First century, tells us astrology was known and used by a former race that lived on the earth before the flood, stating that "they received their information concerning the zodiac and planets from Adam, who in turn had been taught by God Himself."

Josephus also said the flood had been foreseen by Seth, who engraved his prediction on two pillars of stone. The historian added that he himself had seen the remains of those pillars. He further stated that Noah used and taught the science of astrology, and, with Enos, preserved it to the days of Abraham.

Abraham, we learn from other sources (chiefly the works of Bishop Eusebius, one of the most learned and just men of the Fourth century), was a great adept, or even a master, of Chaldean astrology.

The astrology of the Chaldeans was of a secret nature, concealed by everything along the gamut from reverse symbols to an unfathomable code known as "The Priests' Alphabet," in which true meanings were recorded, abbreviated, and mixed up. Years of study were required merely to learn this alphabet, we are told, and then the candidate who could at last read the words had practically to learn another language to find out what they meant.

It is unfortunate that such was the case, according to deeper students of this subject today, for many of the great keys to a true understanding of life and the higher laws of nature perished with their possessors. We may have the books they left, but we are largely in the dark as to their real message. Moses was known to be a master of astrological wisdom and its application. Pearce, a leading astrologer of the Nineteenth century, says Moses was taught by the Chaldean Magi, who were also the instructors of the great Egyptian priesthood. For this reason, it is believed by students, the first five books of the Bible, accredited to Moses, might well be a part of this mysterious and marvelous literature.

The Romans did all they could to ruin real astrology, for they used it as a divinatory art almost exclusively, pretending to tell fortunes of kings and in other ways using its terms and symbols for personal and political promotion. It is the distortion of astrology which occurred under Nero, Domitian, and other emperors that our present day objectors rightfully discredit.

Fortunately, the knowledge we have of planetary influences and their mode of action in the human realm will enable us to reconstruct most, if not all, of the lost wisdom.

Those who have been powerful links in the chain of knowledege that reaches up to us from that great civilization under the Chaldeans and Egyptians, now slowly being rebuilt for our modern minds, are the scientific leaders of history. The world is forever in debt to Pythagoras, to Plato, to Newton, to Kepler, to Napier, and to a host of other men of vision and penetration, all of whom have spoken definitely for astrology.—Chicago Tribune.

SPELL OF EGYPT TAKES HOLD OF MODERN VISITOR

Modern civilization owes its origin to the Nile, the main artery of life in the land of Egypt. The river overflows its banks annually. In the early days this flooding obliterated all landmarks. In order to establish rightful ownership to property, the surveying and registration of land came into general usage. Then to settle border dispute, courts of law were evolved.

In this way the Nile, as the years went on, brought about social, legal and civic order and the institution of taxes for the upkeep of the same. Furthermore, the long stream, running the entire length of the country, led to the building of boats and the consequent development of commerce. Thus civilization was born, nurtured and brought to a high state of perfection on the banks of the River Nile in Egypt, the country from which knowledge gradually spread to Greece and Rome and finally to all parts of the world.

Egypt, the real mother of civilization, was great before either Greece or Rome was born. The valley of the Nile furnished the stage for the greatest drama of the past. Here were reared Egypt's stupendous pyramids, temples and monuments in the highest form of architecture to honor her great, while the rest of mankind was living in rude huts.

The history of this land of mystery goes back so far that it is lost in unknown ages. This land in which the dead alone are great is a palm-girt path of civilization walled in by two deserts. Silence now broods over its great relics of antiquity, its monuments of prehistoric times, its glories which charm by the irresistible attraction of their undying fame, embalmed in the country's art, literature and imperishable ruins.

Time has made but slight changes in the land of the Pharaohs. Egypt does not change. It is much the same as it was before the coming of Christ. Except in Cairo and Alexandria modern innovations are few. Water is still transported the way it was in the time of Moses. The grain is winnowed under the same methods employed when Joseph was governor. Everything is ancient and different. That is what makes the country so charming to the visitor.

Thousands have Ended their Bowel Worries by taking this advice!

Can constipation safely be relieved? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say the many thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not likely to cure your constipation with salts, pills, tablets or any of the habit-forming cathartics. But you can safely relieve this condition by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

THE LIQUID TEST:

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Simple, isn't it? And it works! The right liquid laxative brings thorough bowel action without using force. An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, and perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna, a natural laxative; the dose can be measured, and the action thus regulated to suit your individual need.

If there are children in your household, don't give them any fad form of laxative, but use a healthful, helpful preparation like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Its very taste will tell you it is wholesome, and agreeable to the stomach. Delightful taste, and delightful action; there is no discomfort at the time, or after. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, all ready to take.

A Frank Statement Concerning Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

We believe the use of pills and tablets containing mineral drugs is rapidly giving way to gentle regulation of the bowels with a liquid laxative.

We believe Dr. Caldwell's original prescription of fresh herbs, pure pepsin, and senna is the ideal family laxative.

And we know it is a safe preparation for children and expectant mothers because it does not cause bowel strain or irritate the kidneys.

BANK OF AMER. OFFERS PRIZES TO STATE YOUTH

As means of inspiring the youth of California to envision the nation's future progress, Bank of America today announced the endowment of two $2,000 scholarships to be awarded to the best essays on hte subject of the "World of 1964."

The bank's contest is limited to the junior citizens of California, under 18 years of age, in whose hands the control of affairs will rest three decades from new. Paraphrasing the well-remembered proffer of "a penny for your thoughts," the bank is offering the youth of California "A Million Pennies For Your Thoughts."

A total amount of ten thousand dollars will be apportioned to writers of the best essays shwing the progress in human life which can ensue during the next thirty years in such fields as science, invention, finance, and government.

A guide to the nation's possibilities of advancement by 1964 is found in the history of the accomplishments of the last 30 years, a period in which automobiles, radio, aircraft and many other necessities of modern life have been developed, and in which the Bank of America has grown from a small unit to the largest branch banking institution in the United States.

Winners of the two primary awards will be offered scholarships in any university, college or school for which they can meet the qualifications. Numerous cash awards also will be made. The competition is widely endorsed by educational organizations.

FEDERAL AGENCY PUTS GIRL HITCH HIKERS IN HOMES

LOS ANGELES, April 9th.— Itinerant girls and women whose hitchhiking migrations have eventually stranded them in California are now being aided by the Federal Transient Service of the State Emergency Relief Administration in much the same way as the trnsient men and boys, it was announced today by H. A. R. Carleton, driector of this government service in California.

Out-of-state girls and women who have arrived here penniless and who are friendless may receive food, shelter, and care at the hands of the federal government upon application to the nearest transient registration office, Carleton declared in response to numerous inquiries.

Co-operation of the public in referring all transient women and girls in actual need of aid to one of these government bureaus is asked in the announcement, which states that a sympathetic study of each individual is made upon her application to determine whether she should be returned to her home or kept in the state under the type of care which will help in her re-habilitation.

In the event the latter course is decided upon, the transients are being placed in various homes that are operated by social agencies, where their care is paid for by the government's Transient Service. When medical attention is needed, this is also provided and the girls are given care in sanitariums or convalescent homes.

LICENSE BUTTONS WILL BE ISSUED TO ANGLERS

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9—With the opening of the trout season in California May 1, Major John L. Farley, executive officer of the state fish and game commission, urges all possessors of angling licenses to keep conspicuously on display, while fishing, the button that goes with each permit.

By doing this, Major Farley points out, it will be possible to more easily determine those who are fishing without a license. For when a man is seen out in the stream or along the lakes without a button pinned on his coat or shirt, fellow anglers are apt to ask him where his button might be. If he fails to produce one he will be in a pretty tough spot, and have considerable explaining to do to the anglers as well as the game warden.

This is the first time the button idea has been used in California, and they will be issued with both hunting and angling licenses. Governor James Rolph, Jr., has been presented with angling license button No. 1 by the Commissioners, and one of the things that helped him to recover his recent illness was a determination to be out fishing on May 1, the opening of the season.

A COOL KITCHEN WHEN YOU USE THE NEW ELECTRIC RANGE AND WATER HEATER
Automatic ELECTRIC WATER HEATER
Automatic ELECTRIC

IT is more than mere talk—the modern electric range and water heater do mean cooler kitchens in hot summer.

Just why they do mean this is simply explained. For example, in the thickly insulated oven of the electric range cooking temperature may be at 500 degrees. Yet outside on the oven top or door it is just barely warm. The same is true of the electric water heater—the water inside the tank may be hot but the tank cover is hardly warmer than your hand.

Why not have these cool and capable kitchen companions working for you in your kitchen this summer and all the summers for many years? They are not expensive to buy right now. Purchase terms are exceptionally easy. And on the new low electric rate they are most economical to operate.

1¢ -per kilowatt hour! A new low rate block in the electric rate for cooking and water heating consumers.
